Since the above publication, the authors have noticed an error in the 'Results' section. The sentence:

The prevalence of the major criteria in the other four organ systems did not show significant differences in accordance to gender.

Should read:

The prevalence of fulfilling major cardiovascular criteria was significantly more often present in men (22/31) than in women (24/56, $P=0,014$). The prevalence of the major criteria in the other four organ systems did not show significant differences in accordance to gender.

The typesetters would like to apologise for this mistake.
